NUMBER 67

It is hoped that summer has not forgotten to make its annual visit.

There are those who claim that the sprightly little Emma Abbott cannot sing much, but she has managed to clear $52,000 during the past season.

The champion bicyclist of the United States was not sufficiently skilled in riding his machine to prevent himself from being thrown from it and killed.

Massachusetts has boasted that there is more intelligence to the square mile in that State than in any other State in the Union; and yet the divorce business there is increasing to an alarming extent.

There is a prospect that Hannibal Hamlin will come home from Spain where he fills the position of American Minister. If he does that it will be the first time in forty-two years that he has been out of office.

The strike in Pennsylvania threatens to be exceedingly serious—very serious to the working classes. Strikers seem to forget one thing, that "capital can afford to lay idle, while the workmen cannot."

Congressman Williams is charged with saying that while he recognizes the high culture and literary talents of Lowell, he thinks the United States should have "a representative of the sturdier element of American society and American ideas at the court of St. James." Let us see: We tried one of these unorthodox and sturdier representatives at one time, and though he couldn't represent the dignity of the United States very well, he proved to be the best poker player we ever sent to the court of St. James.

For the first time in the history of this country, an Executive of a State offers pardon to a highway murderer and notorious robber if he will stop his daring crimes. This, it appears, is what Governor Crittenden, of Missouri, wants to do with Frank James. This may be the best way to put an end to the lawlessness of James but it is a singular and sad commentary on the detective service of the United States, and upon the officers of the law in Missouri. James will be a bigger hero than ever when he gets that pardon. He will then be in a condition to take the lecture field.

The Republicans of Iowa are just the same as ever. They never lag much, and rarely make mistakes. This year they are getting ready for an early campaign. The dates fixed so far for the Congressional conventions are much earlier than usual, and a determination appears to be manifested to push the campaign work right along, and push it vigorously. Another encouraging fact is the harmony that reigns in the party notwithstanding the numerous candidates that are pressing their claims to nominations. The purpose of the party is to send a solid Republican delegation from the State to Congress.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio which makes the Pond law unconstitutional, is hailed by the liquor men in that State with great rejoicing, but the political parties do not seem to have any occasion for a display of good feeling. The constitution of Ohio prohibits the licensing of liquor saloons, whereas the Pond law provided for a uniform tax of $300 on saloons throughout the State. It was intended as a tax, but the Supreme Court construed it as a license, and therefore unconstitutional. It is said that the decision will take the liquor question out of politics in that State. What will be done in regard to liquor matters cannot be determined at this time.

The students' rebellion at the Lawrence University at Appleton, in this State, seems to be on the decline. Public sentiment has been so pronounced against the course of the students that they have been compelled to greatly modify their conduct. From what can be learned from the Appleton papers, both of which strongly support Dr. Huntley and sternerly rebuke the students, the principal allegation of the students is that the president is tyrannical in the enforcement of the rules and discipline of the University; and that the rules have been changed to lessen the liberties of the students. It has been ascertained that the rules have not been changed, and all that the president has done to incur the displeasure of the students has been to enforce the rules of long standing, and in this he has been supported by the faculty. A number of the students have been in the habit of drinking and carousing, neglecting their studies, and making fools of themselves. In attempting to put a stop to this, the president of course received the opposition of the dissipated and lawless students, and this tended to inflame the spirit of the rebellion. Then again there has been, it seems, an unrestrained intercourse of the ladies and gentlemen students in regard to attending all sorts of social amusements and entertainments, without obtaining, as the rules have demanded ever since the institution has been built, the permission to do which must be obtained of at least one of the faculty. In short, the students of the University seem to have got the idea into their heads that they could come and go when and where they liked, and in all things do as they pleased without let or hindrance. When the president put his foot down and declared the rules of the University must be obeyed and the young men must carry themselves in a manly fashion, then came the rebellion which has disgraced all who have taken a hand in it. We are glad to see that the papers of Appleton, and those in other parts of the State, are standing by Dr. Huntley. He is doing a great deal of good for that university, and has done enough work to nearly kill two men, in the attempt to place it on a sound financial footing; and after he has done all this, to be confronted by a rebellion of the students he has labored so industriously to assist, is an outrage that commands public reprobation.

JUSTICE AT LAST.

After Much Confusion and Disorder Mackey Is Sworn In and Takes His Seat.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—The dispute in the House growing out of the Mackey-Dibble contested election was finally settled this evening by a vote of 150 yeas against three nays in favor of seating Mackey, and the latter was brought forward and sworn in. This result was not accomplished without a lingering debate, which lasted fully eight hours, being opened in the morning by Mr. Atherton, of Ohio, and closed by the chairman of the election committee, Mr. Calkins, about 7 o'clock to-night. The speech of the former provoked considerable rejoinder from the Republican side, which the Democrats strove to counteract by calls to order and shouts for fair play; a stormy scene ensued, as many as two scores of representatives being on their feet at once clamoring for recognition, and Mr. Crowley, the temporary chairman, was kept busy manipulating the gavel and appealing to members to resume their seats.

No bad temper was displayed on either side, and finally good judgment prevailed, and the speaker was allowed to proceed uninterrupted. When he concluded, Mr. Ranney, of Massachusetts, replied in defense of the position of the elections committee, claiming that the fullest investigation had been made before a report was agreed upon. Greenback Jones, of Texas, the next speaker, endeavored to satisfy both sides, and partially succeeded in making a successful straddle, as his effort was rewarded with applause from each side alternately as he sat down. Mr. Calkins took the floor to demand the previous question, and was promptly met by Ex-Speaker Randall with a motion to recommend the subject, which was lost. Mr. Dibble was allowed ample time to defend himself, and made a strong case favorable to his retention of the seat. But the majority had determined to oust him and his pleading was in vain, and he was forced to join Cannon and Chalmers, and so the long contest ended.

A DRUNKARD'S CRIME.

BOSTON, Mass., May 31.—An Ashville (N. C.) special to the Herald says: "While T. Eastman, a farmer, was on a spree, his little daughter, aged six years, secured his whiskey bottle and got drunk. The father threatened to kill the child, and she begged piteously for her life, saying, 'Pa, don't kill me now, I am drunk; wait till I get sober.' The infuriated parent dragged the child out of bed and beat her to death."

Nobody should neglect a cough. Take HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND and TAR. Price's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

A BIG STRIKE.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 31.—At 12 o'clock to-night the iron mills of Pittsburgh and vicinity, of the Shenango valley, in Pennsylvania, and of the Mehon Valley in Ohio, and of Wheeling and vicinity in West Virginia, shut down for a long fight with the Amalgamated Association on the question of wages. The association demands an advance of 50 cents per ton for hauling, and certain advances for other classes of work, and the manufacturers of mills west of the Allegheny Mountains say they cannot grant the increase and will not grant it. About 18,000 men in Pittsburgh and vicinity will thus be thrown out of employment, and in the entire country mentioned probably 40,000 persons will be left without work to-morrow. The increase demanded by the working men would entail an additional expense of $1,000,000 per year on the iron manufacturers of Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio alone. But while there are many predictions of a fierce and bitter struggle between capital and labor, the conservative element do not really believe it will be near as bad as the manufacturers would like the public to believe.

THAT PUBLIC BUILDING AT RACINE.

To the Editor.

WASHINGTON, May 27, 1882: I see that you kindly copy a Washington dispatch to the Milwaukee Sentinel in which I am represented as saying that the great obstacle in the way of procuring a public building at Racine is the fact that no federal court is held there, but that I proposed to have one held.

It seems that a playful remark of mine must have been taken by the reporter in earnest, and in good faith, he desired to show my zeal in the matter. But all citizens will understand that the judicial districts of the State would hardly be changed to secure a public building at any given place. And though well intended I would hardly want to father the above as a serious proposition.

Very truly yours,

C. G. WILLIAMS.

THE FIRE RECORD

LANCASTER, Pa., May 31.—The millinery store of Goldschalk & Lederman was this morning damaged by fire and water. Loss $50,000; insurance, $25,000.

Boston, May 31.—The Magee Furnace Company's foundry at Chelsea and some buildings opposite were burned to-night. Loss, $28,000; insured.

PUTNAM, Conn., May 31.—The Bagbee block burned this morning, and the adjoining buildings were badly damaged. Loss, $60,000; partially insured.

MILWAUKEE, May 31.—Fire at Appleton destroyed the warehouse owned by Hutchinson & Co. Total loss, $14,000; insurance, $6,000—$2,000 in the North British.

WHEELING, W. Va., May 31.—One of the heaviest fires occurring here for years broke out shortly before 4 o'clock this morning in the wholesale grocery and liquor store of M. Reilly, on Main street, north of Fourteenth. The loss on the building will be $10,000. The stock at inventory, January 1, was $76,000, but this includes meat in the pork-house, powder in the magazine, whisky in bond, salt in the yards, a horse, wagon, etc., amounting in all to about $21,000. The total loss is about $60,000.

THE OHIO POND LAW.

CINCINNATI, May 31.—The belief to-day among Republicans is that the decision by the Supreme Court that the Pond liquor law is unconstitutional will, instead of adding to the perplexities of the party, rather open the way for more harmonious action, and the adoption of a platform by the State convention that will be more generally satisfactory than seemed possible before. It was the decision of the court that the Pond law was in the nature of a licensing of the liquor traffic. The platform of the State convention of last summer recommended that the question of so changing the constitution as to provide for the licensing of the liquor traffic be submitted to the people. With the temperance question as a prominent issue the State was carried on that platform. The action of the Legislature in passing the Pond law, it now appears, can be construed as in entire harmony with the Cleveland platform, except that it was the representatives of the people instead of the people themselves who undertook to settle the liquor question.

HISTORICAL.

Fumigation with brimstone is of Roman origin.

The Gauls loved to decorate their helmets, swords and buckles with coral.

A crown of red-hot iron was an ancient punishment for rebels and regicides.

At Pompeii, combs have been found exactly like the modern fine tooth kind.

The Saxon great-great coin was so called because it was the largest English coin then known.

The elephant was put upon the coins of Cesar because that animal was called Cesar in Mauritania.

The first establishment for the manufacture of straw bonnets was started in Somers, Conn., in 1830.

The most common measure of capacity among the Romans was the Amphora, nearly nine English gallons.

The coffin of Lambert, the celebrated "great man," was four feet, and a half wide and two feet and a half deep.

The first town on the Aroostook, Maine, was Maysonville, settled in 1820 by a few men from New Brunswick.

By the Saxon laws twelve years of age was fixed as the earliest possible development of the legal understanding.

The original use to which Boston Common was put was for a pasture for cattle and parade ground. It was called Century Field.

The Greek word for horse-shoe first occurs in the ninth century. Horses were then only shod in time of frost or for special occasions.

Huts, instead of tents, were used by the ancient English soldiers, as the modes of warfare consisted chiefly in sieges and standing camps.

Coats of arms and heraldry were introduced into England in 1100. The arms of England and France were first quartered by Edward III. in 1333.

In Elizabeth's time "repeater" watches were so rare that some rustics took one that they heard for the devil, and threw it out of the window with the tongs.

The first silver money coined in Rome was A. U. C. 484. The mint was in the temple of Juno Minerva, which circumstance occasioned the origin of our word money.

A circulating library in the Middle Ages may seem surprising. In 1342 a law was framed in Paris compelling all public booksellers to keep books to lend out on hire.

Beetle work, the process of inlaying by use of the saw, derives its name from a French workman, Boule, who invented and carried it on during the reign of Louis XIV.

Augustus used a memorandum book, in which he made notes of what he wished to say, he published, as a private Panegyric, for taking notes at public orations.

Under the early laws of the Athenians a false witness was to be thrown headlong from the capitol. Treading down another's cornfield at night was punishable by death.

The term Quaker was first applied to the sect in derision. When George Fox, the founder, was brought before the magistrate he told him to quake before the word of the Lord.

Bombards were large old barrels, and the vessels used to carry beer to soldiers on duty, from whence came bombardman, for one who carried about provisions, corrupted by the sailors into bumbard.

During a storm in Vermont, in 1870, the lightning struck a horse in pasture, killing off his head, or pulling it out, cutting a hole two inches long in his head and throwing off his shoes. The horse recovered.

Advice 3,500 Years Old.

One of the oldest books in existence is a collection of proverbs by Ptochopos, an Egyptian, who lived somewhere about the time of Abraham. Among his injunctions is the following, which we commend to the writers on woman's emancipation, domestic economy, and other topics, who may think that the subjects which they discuss are fresh and suggested by the increased intelligence of modern civilization:

"If thou be wise, furnish thy house well; woo thy wife and do not quarrel with her; nourish her; deck her out, for fine dress is her greatest delight. Purpose to make her glad as long as thou livest. She is a blessing which her possessor should treat as becomes his own standing. Be not unkind to her."

This counsel is none the less useful at the present day, because 3,500 years have elapsed since it was given.

A Queer Justice.

Not long since we called the attention of the Texas Legislature to the antics of Parson Billups, who is also a Justice of the Peace in Crosby County. It will be remembered that in his judicial capacity he fined a man seventy-five dollars, and as the man could not pay the fine, he ordered the culprit to work out his fine by cutting cedar poles for the State of Texas, as he, the Justice, needed the poles to make a fence with, and would settle with the State of Texas for them.

Well, a gentleman just from Crosby County has been telling us some fresh official pranks of Parson Billups that should be stopped, even if the Governor has to send the rangers—that are guarding the cash balance—up to Crosby County, and leave the cash balance unguarded.

It seems there was a couple living near Justice-Billups' who did not agree, on account of marital infelicity. The husband applied to Justice Billups for a divorce. Billups said that he was not quite sure that the Magna Charta conferred the right of granting divorces on Justices of the Peace, but that he would take the case under advisement and let the husband know in a few days. Justice Billups then gave up all his mind to the question of jurisdiction. When the man who was suffering for the divorce called again, Judge Billups told him that, as in our courts law and equity were blended, he, Billups, being a minister of the Gospel as well as a Justice of the Peace, had the constitutional right to grant a divorce while sitting in law, as Gaitheau calls it. He then drew up one of the most remarkable documents ever penned, dividing the property, and declaring the marriage—that is the way he spelled marriage—null and void ab initio, signing the document—

JAMES BILLUPS, J. P.
JAMES BILLUPS, D. D.

About a week afterward the newly-divorced husband, accompanied by a great big German girl, a newly-arrived immigrant, who could not speak a word of English, entered the office of the County Clerk. The rest of the procession consisted of the newly-divorced wife, arm in arm with a strange gentleman, who had recently moved into the neighborhood from Dallas. The newly-divorced husband produced Judge Billups' remarkable document and said:

"I want this here bill of divorce duly recorded, and then we want two marriage licenses."

The County Clerk took the document, and after he had nearly laughed himself into fits, he told the loving couples that old Billups had no more right to grant divorces than the man in the moon. The County Clerk refused to record the document, but retained it, and if the Legislature needs it to inaugurate proceedings against Billups, J. P. and D. D., they can get it. Of course there was a scene when the clerk explained the matter.

We have still another instance of the ignorance, or worse, of Billups, J. P. and D. D. A man brought suit against another in Billups' court for $15. The defendant came into court, said he could not pay the amount, but turned over a silver watch to Billups with which to satisfy the suit. The plaintiff refused to accept the watch in payment of his claim, and the defendant refused to take it back. Several months passed over without the parties coming to any agreement, during all of which time Billups sported the watch. Finally the plaintiff agreed to take the watch in satisfaction of the debt, but Billups, J. P., told him he came too late, the time within which the watch could have been accepted had expired, according to the statute of limitation; that the watch had reverted to the State; that he had dealing in his official capacity with the State, and would settle with Texas for it. That's the way the case stands now.—Texas Siftings.

A $100,000 Wager.

A curious wager was decided in this city last Wednesday afternoon, which was so singular in its results that we relate it for the benefit of our readers. A well-known millionaire, member of the Pacific Club, having occasion, some six weeks ago, to use a district messenger boy to carry a note, the subject of abnormal and marvelous slowness of said concern's messengers came up for discussion by the members of the club. In the course of the argument, another wealthy citizen gravely offered to wager $100,000 that he could go to New York and return, via Panama, before one of the district messenger boys could execute any errand of reasonable distance.

To the surprise of the listeners this bet was gravely accepted by the first mentioned plutocrat, and, after some hesitation on the part of the other, the agreement was duly drawn up and signed, the two checks placed in the hands of a stakeholder, umpires selected and preliminaries arranged in a manner on the whole suggestive of Verne's "Around the World in Eighty Days" romance. The next day a messenger boy was rung for at six a. m., and accordingly one answered the call some nine hours subsequently, as is the established custom of the fraternity. At precisely 3.20 p. m. the boy was handed a note addressed to a house in the extreme suburb of the western addition, while at the same moment the proposer of the wager, accompanied by an umpire, jumped into a carriage and caught the overland boat at the wharf. On the road to New York, the gentleman, whom we shall call O'Feelin, was delayed four days by snow blockades, and so missed the steamer, for berths in which he had telegraphed ahead. His party caught the next boat a week later, made a fairly quick passage down the Atlantic side of the continent, crossed the isthmus and took the City of Panama for this port, much encouraged, as a cablegram received as he embarked advised him that the boy, who had been secretly followed by those interested, to see that he met with no intentional detention, was engaged at his twenty-second game of base-ball at the corner of Sixteenth and Divisadero.

Coming up the California coast the Panama broke a crank and was obliged to put into Santa Barbara for repairs. This consumed five more precious days, in which the only solace for the passenger's anxiety was the news that the messenger had made a detour of a few blocks for the purpose of selecting a dog at the pound. Finally the machinery was righted and the vessel got under way. As the Golden Gate was approached Mr. O'Feelin was again in despair, as a heavy fog threatened to cause the steamer's detention outside a day or two. At this critical moment, however, a steam tug, chartered by the traveler's anxious friends, appeared, and, ignoring all risks, the bar was crossed and the wharf reached. A fleet saddle-horse was in readiness, and, throwing himself upon it, the excited man tore like a whirlwind up Market and down Montgomery streets, and dashed upstairs into the club rooms, where the astonished cheers of the members told him he had won.

The fortunate winner had hardly dropped breathless into a chair, and was receiving the congratulations of his friends, when the door again opened and a youth in uniform, with red hair and a chronically inflamed nose, appeared. It was the district messenger.

"Well, did you deliver the note?" asked the exasperated loser, with crushing sarcasm.

"Yes, sir."

"Where's the answer?"

"Down stairs, sir."

"What the dickens do you mean by down stairs?" roared the millionaire.

"Well, you see, sir," said the boy, beginning to snivel, "I dropped the answer while I was playing a game of marbles, coming back, and—a goat ate it up. But I brought the goat along, sir. He's down stairs tied to the lamp-post."

The listener made a furious attempt to clutch the boy's throat, but with a stifled howl of rage he fell dead in an apopleptic fit.

NOTE.—We had really not intended to have killed this party when we started in, but his death seems to be somewhat necessitated by the dramatic requirements of the case. However, we tender our sincere condolences and regrets to diseased's family, who will doubtless appreciate the delicacy of our position.—San Francisco Post.

Reformed Too Much.

Caricature deals with extreme cases, and overdoes the features of a picture to heighten its blemishes. A reporter of the New York News tries his pencil in this line—describing the effect of trying to abolish the pleasant little compliments, and "thank yous," and "happy-to-see-yous," and "not-at-alls," of social intercourse and courtesy.

"Last Sunday, Parson Bangle became disgusted with the untruthfulness of mankind and preached a vigorous sermon in denunciation of society falsehood. He declared that lies told just out of politeness were just as wicked as those told with the deliberate intention of deceiving as to the value of a horse.

In fact, these society lies get folks into the habit of lying, and they readily pick up the other kind. The sermon made a great impression. Most of the congregation resolved to reform. Coming out of church, Deacon Jones said to Judge Badger, who sits in front of him—

"Judge, I hope you didn't mind my putting my feet under your pew." The Judge was about to reply—

"O, certainly not," but he thought of the sermon and answered, "I did, though; your old boots took up all the room, and were a fearful nuisance."

"Well," said the deacon, "the hair-oil you use smells so it nearly forced us to leave our pews."

"They glared at each other, and just then Mrs. Badger and Miss Jenkins came along. Miss Jenkins asked—

"How do you like my new bonnet?"

"O, I thought it just love!" replied Mrs. B., and then she thought of the sermon, and continued, "No, I didn't, either. It's a horrid thing. I wouldn't be seen with it." And Miss Jenkins got mad and replied—

"Well, if I were you, I'd not wear dirty stockings in church, and if I did, I'd keep 'em out of sight."

"While these honest conversations were going on, Mrs. Ragbag had said to her next-door neighbor, Mr. Gallagher, 'I hope the crying of our baby last night didn't disturb you; and Gallagher replied, 'No—that is—yes.' Then Mrs. Ragbag called him a wretch, and wept.

"And then the clergyman came out and asked young Symonds how he liked the sermon. Symonds said, 'It was a grand effort—no, parson, it was nonsense.'"

"Sir," said the parson; as he drew himself up indignantly.

"The parson went home and meditated in gloomy frame of mind for three hours, and finally concluded that society lying was wicked, but he wouldn't preach against it again."

Divesting the subject of all the fun the News reporter works into it, the reader can use his common sense, as well as conscience, to reconcile theory and practice here. When the truth all told would represent a bad feeling, or an unkind or discourteous one, what is called by "Parson Bangle" the "polite lie" is simply an effort of one's better nature to contradict the feeling and is really no more a "lie" than refusing to groan when one has a midnight toothache, or to yawn in company when one is tired, or to laugh in a very ridiculous old person's face.

regard for the feelings and comfort of others never justifies falsehood, but it does justify denials that are real self-denials and professions that are at least honest efforts to be sincere.—Youth's Companion.

A New Street-Car Motor.

The value of an invention that will enable street-cars in cities to carry their own motive power can hardly be over-estimated. Horses are expensive. It requires as many horses to supply a first-class street car as to supply a regiment of cavalry, and besides, horses need a driver. The underground cable arrangement is said to work satisfactorily in San Francisco, but for some reason or other doubts are expressed of its successful application in Chicago and other cities. Dummy engines have been tried but do not give satisfaction. They have an ammonia motor in New Orleans, but it has not succeeded in introducing itself in other cities. But we are promised a solution of the difficulty, at least in the principle of the watch-spring, experiments with which in Philadelphia are said to have been attended with signal success. A steel spring coiled up tight and well secured is one of the most striking examples of conserved force that can be imagined. It may be borne safely and easily from one place to another, and made to yield its power by an equalized process at the point where it is wanted. Of course, the spring for running a street car must be large, strong and well made of the best tempered steel. The one experimented with at Philadelphia is a band 300 feet long, six inches wide and one-quarter inch thick, wound up by machinery to a coil only forty inches in diameter, and then secured. This coiled spring contains all the force imparted by the steam engine during the process of winding, and this is said to be sufficient to drive a car loaded with persons a distance of five miles. The uncoiling is graduated by an ingenious arrangement of brakes under control of the conductor, which enables him to stop and start the car at pleasure, and a check prevents the car from going at a greater rate of speed than nine miles an hour. If the new motor can really do all that is promised of it we shall soon have street cars carrying their own motive agent and thousands of horses released from the most harassing task that horse flesh is now required to perform.—St. Louis Republic.

A Suicide's Singular Letter.
Peter Gannon, who suicided in New York, has left a singular and rather readable letter for public perusal. He committed the deed in Central Park by opening a blood vessel, after having failed to kill himself by taking morphine, but did not die until after being conveyed to the Roosevelt Hospital. After writing at great length on intemperance, he proceeds:
"I think my mind is well balanced, and I have no fears of death. What I regret is that I did not possess the means of escape by the facts of Spiritualism. The mere act of dying is nothing to me, if there is not physical pain, and I think I know something of the country to which I am going. I know many good men who would leave the world to-day if it were not for the fear of death; and this same fear is the world's greatest benefactor, for without it the world would lose many good men long before they were claimed by death. I am a heathen man, say, 'What a fool to die.' How do you know, you little atoms, groveling in the sand for jewels, groping in the darkness for the essence of light, searching in the haystack for selfishness and dissipation for the needs of happiness? Can the rich man extract happiness enough for his millions? or does the thought that for every dollar he possesses above his actual needs some other human being suffers, embitter his luxury? Bah! this is making considerable of a time over the dropping of an atom into the limitless ocean of eternity. * * * I select this place to die in, first, because I want to die among the trees; secondly, because I don't wish to be disturbed, but to die alone; and last but not least, I don't wish to put any of my friends to the expense of a funeral or the trouble and bother of an inquest. I would like a lock of my mother's hair, in my pocket, buried with my body, and the letter mailed to the person addressed:
"There is something fascinating in the idea of dashing headlong, in full vigor of youth and mental power, across that gloomy, mysterious boundary—the valley of the shadow of death, with the charming uncertainty whether one shall find a paradise, beautiful and happy beyond human conception, or a desolate howling wilderness, or nothing."
In conclusion he writes: "What a beautiful evening! Just the time to die. Say by your grave, I will make another assault on the affections of that coy damsel, death—a thorough coquette, who forces her favors on those who do not want them, but ever dies from the ardent, earnest wooer. But I will court you in so bold a fashion this time you must yield. How one hates to inflict physical pain on one's self! It did not bother me a particle to inject and swallow morphine, but I do hate to slash into my arteries. Well, by the old way, I believe I've had enough of you!"

Cowboys.
In Arizona, Texas, and Colorado, I learn from other sources, several thousand people are engaged in herding cattle. They are a distinct class of people who, from their peculiar associations, become as a class so intensely bad and so hardened as to join with each other in the commission of misdeeds. They are employed to keep the cattle from dividing or straying from the herd, and for months at a time see no one but the person who supplies them with provisions from the nearest town. But when they get their pay and go to town there is no limit to their outrageous conduct. They get drunk, gamble, fight, and shoot recklessly at friend or foe. A long plug of black tobacco, a couple of revolvers and a heavy knife are sure accompaniments of a cowboy. They are coarse and cowardly and utterly despised by every decent person. To have killed his own associate, the cowboy in the estimation of his associates, so that friendship or kindred ties are no barriers to the cowardly bullet. They meet in saloons, and a word from an outsider may be the signal for his death.
The above was written by a guileless correspondent who probably never saw one and does not know yet whether the cowboy is a friend or foe.
Every little while some white-livered scoundrel from the effete East, strays out into the Rocky Mountains, and after getting his breakfast begins to write up the country. The letters written by some such fugitives from justice who come here, write up the wild West and go back on the next train are about as reliable as powder-house.
We have no doubt the world that men in Wyoming worth from $200,000 to half a million dollars, clothed, however, in brown canvas and leather chaps, have been written up by these James Crow tourists by the column as desperate and dangerous men. There are scores of college graduates here in the West, whose names are as old and respected as any in America, and whose record is as clear as the mountain air, whose bronzed and bearded faces, coupled with their sun-burnt, African features and so forth, have no doubt furnished material for the hand-me-down journalist to write up the bloody desperado of this heathen land.
We are beginning to become weary of this thing. Not that we have not some hard cases in the West. Of course, there are, too, bad cowboys. We have seen several of them. So, also, there are bad men in law and journalism, and even in the pulpit; but when the cowboys are all lumped off as a crew between a coyote and a road agent, we desire to enter our protest.
We should like to see the man who wrote the above having a picnic among about twenty active Western cowboys. They would make it interesting for him.

Who Was Nemesis?
In Grecian mythology Nemesis was a female divinity who appears to have been regarded as the personification of the righteous anger of the gods. She is represented as inflexibly severe to the proud and insolent. According to the legend, she was the daughter of Night, though she is sometimes called a daughter of Erebus or of Oceanus. The Greeks believed that the gods were enemies of excessive human happiness, and that there was a power that preserved a proper compensation in human affairs from which it was impossible for the sinner to escape. This power was embodied in Nemesis, and she was in an especial manner the avenger of family crimes and the humbler of the overbearing. There was a celebrated temple sacred to her at Rhamnus, one of the boroughs of Attica, about sixty stadia distant from Marathon; the inhabitants of that place considered her the daughter of Oceanus. According to a myth preserved by Pausanias, Nemesis was the mother of Helen by Jupiter, and Leda, the reputed mother of Helen by Jupiter, was only in fact her nurse, but this myth seems to have been invented in later times to represent the divine vengeance which was inflicted on the Greeks and Trojans through the instrumentality of Helen.

A CERTAIN peculiar plant is known in New South Wales as the "shoeblack plant." The flowers contain a large proportion of a mucilaginous juice, which forms an excellent substitute for shoe-black, producing a brilliant polish. This juice is used by Chinese ladies for dyeing the hair, and it is said that in Java the flowers are really used for blacking shoes.

It is calculated that the amount of force daily expended by an adult weighing 150 pounds in the performance of the ordinary work of the body would raise 3,400 tons one foot, if applied mechanically.

How the Aurora is Formed.
The following theory is propounded to account for the observed interrelation of earth currents, magnetic storms, aurora and sun spots. Professor Adams assumes the sun to be a magnet, and infers that changes in his magnetism affect the magnetism of the earth. Further, the sun and moon, by dragging the atmosphere toward them as the earth revolves, may cause that friction between air and earth, and also that evaporation, which together may generate the supply of positive electricity in the air and negative in the earth. "Again," he says, "these tides in the atmosphere will cause the mass of it to lag behind the revolving solid earth, and at a height of thirty or forty miles we have a layer of air which, for air, is a comparatively good conductor of electricity. Here, then, we have not a lagging of the magnet behind the conductor, but a lagging of the conductor behind the magnet, and hence, according to the laws of Faraday, we may expect a current or a gradual building up of electricity in the air in the opposite direction to that of the earth's crust." Thus, the regular tidal waves in the atmosphere would cause the gradual transfer of positive electricity from the poles toward the equator, either as a current or a mass of air statically charged. "When the air is charged up to discharging point we may get the sudden discharges, such as the aurora in the air and the earth current in the earth; and since the conducting layer of air appears to lag behind the earth in the colder polar regions, possibly within twenty miles of the earth's surface it may be found that the discharge of the aurora may even take place from earth to air by gradual, slow discharge, aided, as it may be, by the state of moisture of the air, and by change of temperature and other causes."

POSITIVELY CURED BY
Benson's Caprine Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why they are Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:
First. Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts with increased tubercular stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.
Second. Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.
Third. Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.
Fourth. Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.
Fifth. Because over 1000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters of medicines for external use.
Sixth. Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.
